

Political Inclusion National Summit 2023

Politics and voting are an important way for people to have a say.

Politics is not just about voting. It means thinking about:

- What we want Australia to be like
- Government decisions about laws, health, education, and other things

Learning about politics and elections can be hard for some people with disability.

We will have an online summit about politics, voting and inclusion.

A summit is a meeting where people come together to learn and make decisions.

The summit is run by Inclusion Designlab and the University of Melbourne.

At the summit:

- People with disability and experts will talk about politics and inclusion.
- We will talk together about good ideas about inclusion and make a plan.

The summit is for two days.

The days are 14 and 15 August.

The Summit is free. It is for:

- People with an intellectual disability
- People with a brain injury
- Other people who need support to learn about politics and voting
- Supporters, advocates and researchers.

To find out more and to register visit www.eventbrite.com.au/e/political-inclusion-national-summit-2023-tickets-662203878627