Introduction

The Commonwealth Department of Social Services publishes employment outcomes by disability type for Employment Support Services in Australia.¹

Employment Support Services help people with disability who need ongoing support to get and keep jobs in the open labour market.

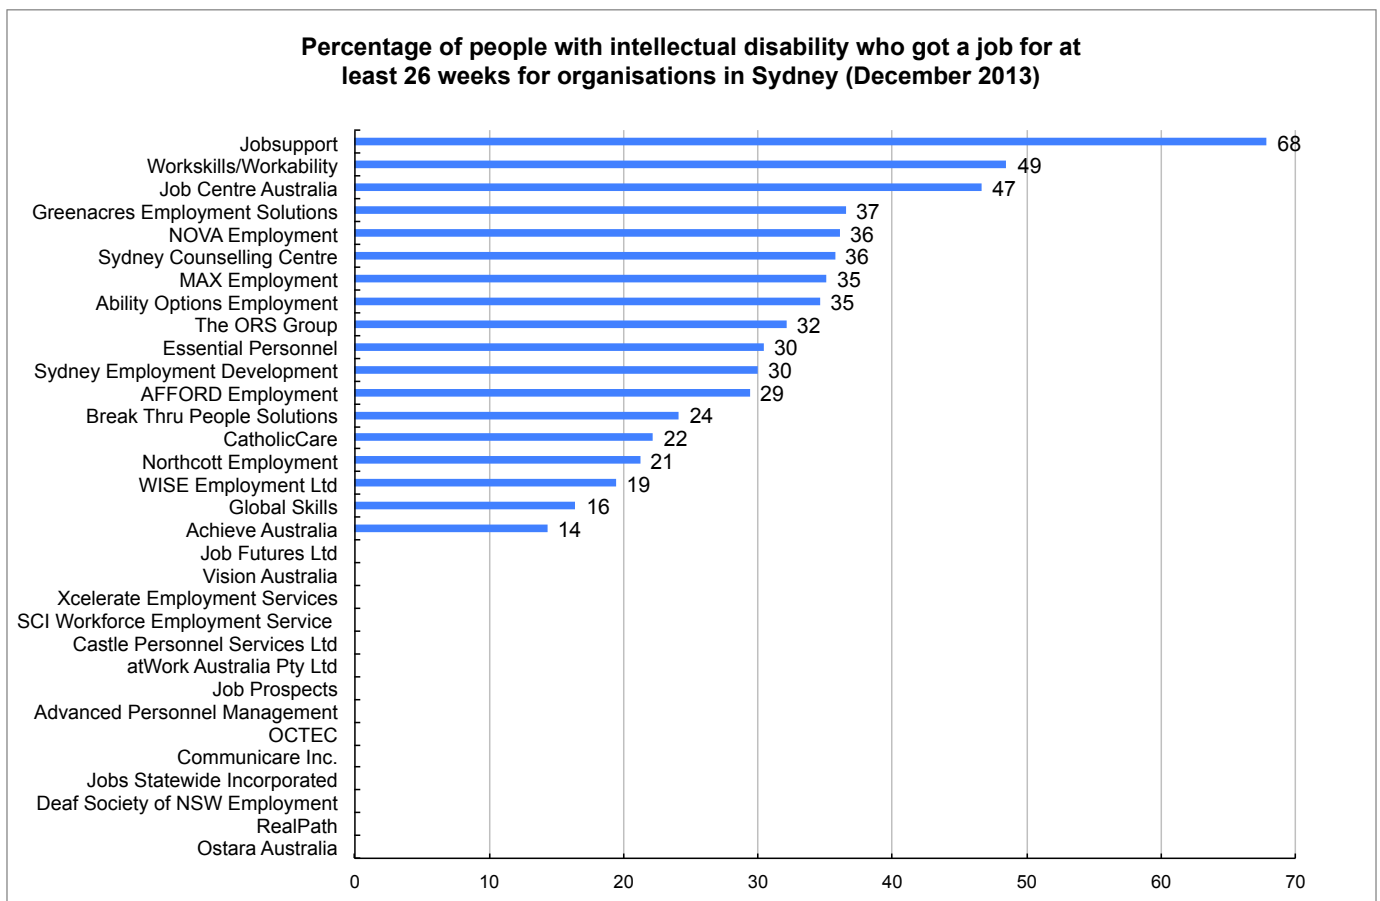

Individual organisation outcomes for people with intellectual disability are shown below to help you choose the best service.

The national average 26 week outcome rate for people with intellectual disability is 30%.

Overall Results for Sydney

The chart below shows the percentage of people with intellectual disability at each organisation in the Sydney labour market region that got a job for at least 26 weeks.²

Results for December 2013 show that Jobsupport (68%) is the organisation most likely to find a jobseeker with intellectual disability a job which lasts for at least 26 weeks.

² This is an average of 26 week rates for organisations in Sydney. Organisations will not have a rate if (1) they are new, or (2) have less than 5 clients with intellectual disability either with a 26 week outcome or at the organisation for 26 weeks or (3) do not have clients with intellectual disability. Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Results by Employment Service Areas

The map below is of the Sydney labour market region. There are 13 employment service areas within the Sydney region.

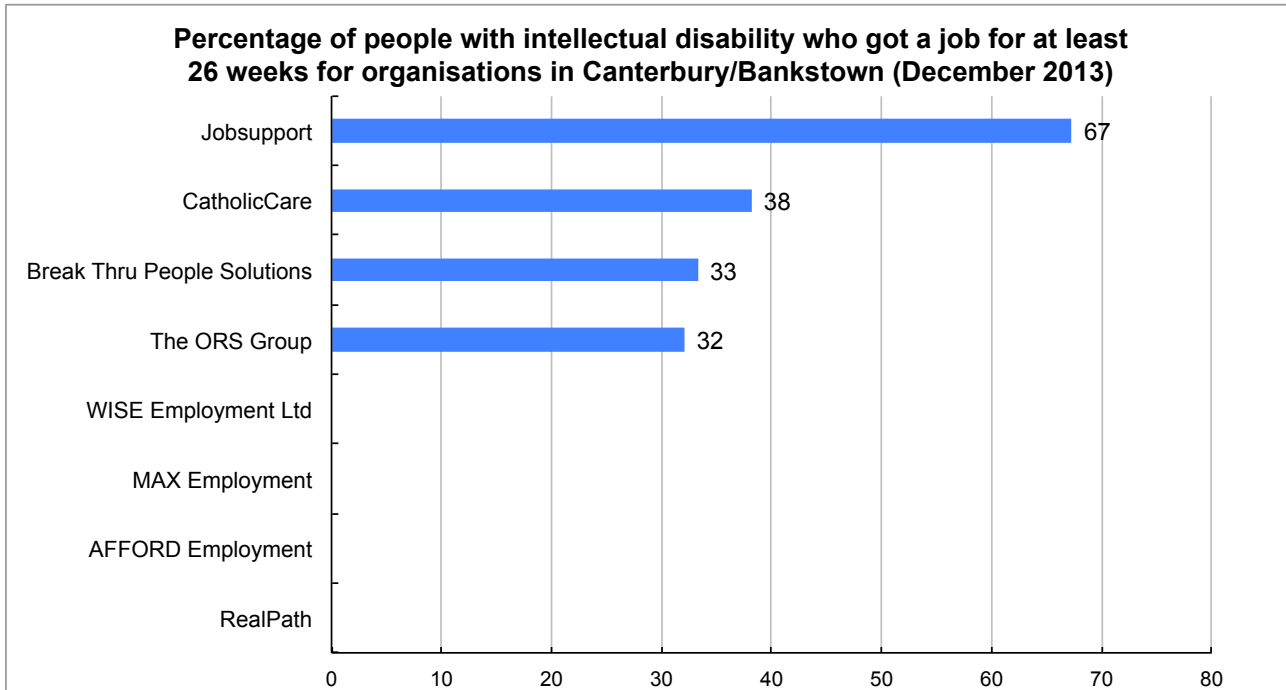

The charts following the map show the percentage of people with intellectual disability at each organisation that got a job for at least 26 weeks in the employment service areas of Sydney. Results are for December 2013.³
